KING IN THE TRENCHES

Aged Monarch in Uniform of Private Fights in Last Desperate Battle—French Make No Decisive Gains.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Saloniki, Nov. 16.—Old Serbia is lost and new Serbia is in a precarious condition, in the opinion of M. Jovanovich, secretary of the Russian legation in Greece. He arrived here from Mitrovitz today, western Serbia, having come by way of Albania. The secretary asserted the Serbians at Belona Pasa were not doing much longer, and the only hope was that the Serbian forces concentrated at Mitrovitz would prove to be strong enough to take the offensive and advance through Tetovo and Monastir.

King Peter in Trenches. The morale of the Serbians is splendid, he continued. Half-trained recruits marched to battle singing patriotic songs. Their aged King Peter is fighting in the trenches, clad in the uniform of a private. He seeks death saying: "When I am killed, you can flee or surrender."

"Panic and misery prevail. There is no bread at Mitrovitz."

After heavy fighting with the reinforced Bulgarian troops in southern Serbia, the French were compelled to retire at two points in the vicinity of Gradiska, twelve miles north of the Greek border. A Bulgarian attack along the Cerna river was repulsed with heavy losses to the attackers.

The battle on the Cerna was waged along the left bank of the river. Two or three Bulgarian divisions were engaged and a desperate attempt was made to pierce the French center. The engagement was in progress with furious intensity for 36 hours, after which the Bulgarians were beaten back along this entire front.

Serbia Badly Menaced.

London, Nov. 16.—The exact situation in central Macedonia is uncertain. Dispatches from the near east are conflicting and doubtful as to the time of events to which they refer, injecting an additional element of uncertainty. It is clear, however, that the Bulgarians have been reinforced and have begun a new offensive.

The operations in central Macedonia, according to Rome accounts, present a most novel situation to armies of Serbia and her allies, which are operating from Tetovo through Pella to the southeastern Serbian frontier. Telegrams received almost simultaneously from Belgrade and London indicate that Tetovo is in the hands of both the Serbians and Bulgarians, but the preponderance of evidence points to Bulgarian occupation of this front.

The Bulgarians are making desperate efforts to force their way through Kachuk Pass in the direction of Saloniki. They are also attempting to advance from Tetovo to Pella and Monastir and by forcing Babuna pass to reach Pella from the other side. These operations are said to have placed Monastir again in danger. Further details of the fighting with the newly arrived French and British forces are large enough to meet the Bulgarian onslaught, which appears to have begun with extraordinary vigor.

Wider Greece will do in event the allied troops are forced back over the Greek border, is still a matter of speculation. A message from Greece says the government will extend to the Serbians the same privileges as those accorded to French and British in case of their encroachment on Greek territory, but in view of the fact that no definite results have been made as to what these privileges will be, further than the original statement by Premier Skouloudis that the allied troops would be permitted to reach the Greek border, the intentions of Greece remain obscure.

Russ Deny Serious Loss.

On the Galician front, the Russians, while admitting they have yielded some ground in the neighborhood of the Styria, do not concede that they have been forced back across the river, as was claimed in German official communications of yesterday.

Further details of the fighting with the Russians have lost the town of Cartorysk, and whether the Russian control of Kovel-Sarny railway is thereby endangered remains uncertain.

Greeks Modify Position. London, Nov. 16.—The Greek government is reported to have modified its position somewhat in favor of the Serbians. The correspondent at Athens of the Exchange Telegraph company says it has decided that in the event of a retreat of the allies to Greek soil, Serbian troops will be accorded on the same footing as the British and French.

Premier Skouloudis originally proposed to permit the French and British to reach sea without interference from Greeks, but to disarm Serbians who cross the border. The change is due, the correspondent says, to the formidable objection raised by the French minister at Athens. However, it still remains for Greece to define its position clearly. Designation of a neutral zone has been suggested.

Try to Take Greek Building. Berlin, Nov. 16.—According to a dispatch from Saloniki, received through Vienna, says the Overseas Agency, "French troops of the Greek port attempted to occupy a Greek military building. The attempt, however, was frustrated by Greek troops. The French military authorities afterward apologized for the incident, declaring a mistake had been made."

RECRUITING CHIEF IN GREAT BRITAIN

Lord Derby.

Lord Derby is the new director of recruiting in Great Britain. He has employed a big army of civilian canvassers, who intend to personally request every man deemed eligible for the army and not engaged in government work to join the colors if he has not already done so. If this plan fails conscription is likely to become an accomplished fact in Great Britain before the war ends.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Cleveland, Ohio, Nov. 16.—Control of the White Company of this city, one of the largest manufacturers of automobiles and motor trucks in the world, has practically passed into the hands of J. P. Morgan and Company of New York, recent admitted today. It was stated in banking circles here that while the deal had not yet been closed, the final arrangements might be completed within the week. A new corporation with $100,000,000 capital, it was said, would absorb the White Company.

Since the outbreak of the European war, sales of White trucks have amounted to between $2,000,000 and $25,000,000 of which profits have been made between 7 and 10,000,000 it was said today.

PLEA FOR CLEMENCY

Resolution Concerning Man About to Be Sentenced

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

San Francisco, Nov. 16.—Resolutions asking for clemency for John Hillstrom, member of the Industrial Workers of the World, sentenced to be shot at Salt Lake City Friday, were adopted today by the American Federation of Labor meeting here in its thirty-fifth annual convention.

In the resolutions it was declared that it is "apparent Hillstrom did not have a fair trial."

The resolutions were presented by the ways and means committee, to which the case was referred yesterday by President Samuel Gompers, after appeals for action in the case were made before the convention by Thomas Mooney, not a member of the convention, and Delegate Canonville, both of Salt Lake City.

The resolution authorized President Gompers to transmit immediately copies of the resolution to Governor Wm. Spry of Utah, the board of pardons of the state, and the British ambassador to the United States.

POSTMASTER TO BE

Drop Charges Against Winnetka Officials

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, Nov. 16.—Definite instructions went from the White House to the postoffice department today to reinstate George Burkitt of Winnetka, Ill., regardless of other charges than that of criticizing the president's engagement, were pending against him. The instructions sent to the postoffice department yesterday were that Burkitt should be reinstated if no other charges were pending against him. Today the question was taken up again, and as a result orders were issued that he be reinstated unconditionally without further delay.

Any other charges against Burkitt probably will be investigated by post-office authorities later.

STATE DEPARTMENT IS STILL AWAITING
REPORT OF ANCONAPublished Statements of Italian and Austrian Governments All Received Thus Far.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, Nov. 16.—State department officials today were still without the official information they seek to determine the attitude of the United States toward the sinking of the Italian liner Ancona by a submarine.

Washington, Nov. 16.—The American government will await the receipt of the Austrian government's statement of fact concerning the sinking of the Italian liner Ancona before considering whether the rights of Americans have been violated. These facts probably will be brought to Ambassador Penfield at Vienna.

The state department now has before it the Italian government's communication addressed to neutral nations denouncing the sinking of the Ancona as an "unparalleled atrocity" and officials have also seen the published statement of the Austro-Hungarian admiralty describing the attack.

The two statements differ. Italy's communication charges that "without even a blank sheet of warning" from the attacking submarine, the Ancona was shelled and the killing and wounding of passengers continued after the vessel stopped.

The admiralty's statement on the other hand, declared the Ancona attempted to escape, and only after repeated shelling was brought to a stop. It also claims the passenger and crew were given forty-five minutes to escape in small boats, and denies the charge that the submarine fired on the boats.

Diplomatic exchanges between the Austrian and American governments probably will follow over the entire question of submarine warfare and obligations of a submarine command to destroy a prize.

CHICAGO LADS FIND
THAT HONESTY PAYSRecover Lost Roll of Bills, Four Years' Savings of Garment Worker, and
Other Things

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Chicago, Nov. 16.—Three Chicago boys are richer by $33.33 apiece today, because when they found $735 belonging to Miss Ethel Goldstein yesterday, they "played honest" and saw that it was returned to her.

Meantime, Miss Goldstein has been lifted from extreme gloom to extreme joy. The money represented four years' savings from her earnings as a garment worker. She has been planning to bring her parents from Russian Poland to a home in Chicago.

Miss Goldstein left the money at home last night. The latter had some shopping to do, and, returning, she found it under her arm. It dropped from her as she crossed a vacant lot between Division street and Oakley boulevard.

Wm. Assemstrom, 13; Henry Cohn, 13, and Samuel Adams, 12, found the roll of bills.

"I put it into mine pocket," explained Henry Cohn, leader, "and right away quick we bring it to school and give it to Mr. Chase."

Frank H. Chase, principal of Wickliffe school, where the boys attend, turned the money over to the police. He learned Miss Goldstein had offered $100 reward for her savings.

"I suppose if I was a millionaire," said Miss Goldstein, "I'd give these boys 33 cents instead of $33.00."

LINE REFUSES MEN

Officials Refuse to Take Them
From England to the United States

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

New York, Nov. 16.—Refusal of the Cunard liner Saxonia to carry eight hundred and twenty-five men of military age, recently caused rioting on the Liverpool docks, according to passengers on the Saxonia which arrived here today. There were Englishmen and Welshmen among those refused passage.

The decision of the steamship officials not to take the men was the result of a threat by the crew to strike if any ill-treated men were given passage.

The would-be passengers tried to force their way aboard and rioting followed. It finally was suppressed.

ORDER PUBLICATION OF ALLIES' REPORTS
IN GERMAN PAPERSGerman Censor Instructed to Insist Upon Printing of News From Enemy Headquarters.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, Nov. 16.—Count Von Bernstorff, German ambassador, today announced he had been informed the German censor had been instructed to insist upon the publication in full in Germany of war reports issued by the allies.

An announcement of the embassy quoting the instructions of the German chief bureau of censors, said: "Cases have occurred where such news items which are unfavorable to us have been eliminated from the reports at order of the censors."

The latter procedure does not correspond with the opinion held by the army headquarters (that the unabridged quotation of the enemy's reports is required at all times, except in case of which financial relations or technical difficulties in printing demand a consideration).

The fear that the official report published by the enemy might sometimes cause "unpleasant" counteraction by the consideration that facts can never be concealed for any length of time and that lies are always recognized as such in the end."

INVENTORS' BOARD
HELD ON SUSPICION
ACTIVE IN FRANCENew Organized Commission Keeps Busy Testing Out New War
Contrivances Submitted.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Paris, Nov. 16.—The work of the ministry of inventions was described today by Prof. Paul Painleve, head of the department. The minister explained that hitherto many well equipped laboratories and scientists identified with them have played no part in the preparation for national defense. It is his purpose to mobilize them.

The first and great difficulty with which the department had to contend, Professor Painleve explained, was the enormous number of useless inventions. All must be tested, the work must be done rapidly. Those picked out as having possibility are referred to special sections, such as electricity or aviation under direction of two or three young and active experts, who will investigate them thoroughly. Such inventions as are deemed worthy are then turned over to the specialists, who assist the inventors to put on the finishing touches.

Inventions are welcomed, whether from world-famed scientists or workmen.

PROXY WEDDING IS

Returns

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Denver, Nov. 16.—The vows given in proxy by her last January were not confirmed, according to the laws of the island of Java, and Miss Eugenia Campbell, the bride, has returned to Denver, concluding a round journey of approximately 20,000 miles.

Miss Campbell and John R. Scholten, an honorary officer in the Dutch army, met at Cripple Creek, Colo., in 1914. Shortly afterward they became engaged, but before the wedding Scholten was ordered to his post at Java. A proxy wedding was arranged.

Miss Campbell participated in the ceremony here, which was performed by Rev. David H. Fouse. A similar ceremony has participated in by Scholten at Batavia.

Miss Campbell declares she was not pleased with the tropical climate of her prospective home, and upon advice of the American consul declined to confirm the vows given in the proxy wedding, and returned to her home in Denver.

The Iro left Shanghai November 2, ostensibly for Bombay, to be sold by her Japanese owners. When the French cruiser approached the Iro, packing cases were thrown overboard. A search of the Iro's papers was discovered and also a shortage in her cargo.

Problems.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, Nov. 16.—"It is unfitting," said Admiral Lord Fisher, former first sea lord of the admiralty in the house of commons this afternoon, "to make personal explanations affecting national interests, when the country is in the midst of a great war."

Lord Fisher made this statement in reply to criticism by Winston Spencer Churchill, who was first lord of the admiralty when the naval attack in the Dardanelles was being planned, according to the charge, would have been blown up on the high seas.

Counsel for Robert Kienzie, Max Brelung and Engelbert Bronkhorst, the others under indictment, did not enter demurrers, but stood on the plea of not guilty entered at the first arraignment.

Fay was taken before Attorney Knox again today, probably to continue the statement he began yesterday. A few minutes later, however, Fay was returned to the Tombs. It was then announced that Fay would not make a confession or any further statement.

OIL COMPANY FINED FOR STATE OFFENSE

Edgerton High Test Oil Company Pays Fine For Not Using Lawful Can in Delivering Gasoline.

For not delivering gasoline in a can "painted in vermilion red," and not having the word "gasoline" plainly stenciled in English thereon, the High Test Oil company of Edgerton was fined five dollars and costs, amounting to all to $6.50 in the municipal court this morning. R. J. Mat-press, oil inspector of Edgerton, made a complaint to District Attorney S.
J. Dunsmuir, who swore out a warrant charging the violation of the state laws.

It was alleged in the complaint by the district attorney that the High Test Oil company delivered gasoline to the Schuler & Young lumber company at Edgerton not in the red can or with the word painted on the vessel. A plea of guilty was made to the charge by F. Matpress, treasurer of the company, who admitted the infringement of the law. The fine and costs were paid. This is the first conviction of this charge on court records in some time.

AUTO CATCHES FIRE GOING DOWN STREET

Department Has Two Alarms Last Evening—Fire at Bidwell Grocery Does Hundred Dollar Damage.

Two alarms were answered by the fire department last evening, the first to put out a blaze threatening to destroy the touring car of George Mc-Grocery and the second at the Bidwell Grocery store on Chatham street, about seven o'clock.

Between five and six o'clock, when George McKinley was driving his automobile east down West Milwaukee street, flames burst out from the motor. The machine was driven to the curb and the department called.
Chemicals from the chief's car were employed to put out the fire. It is supposed that the motor started from a short circuit in the electrical wiring. The damage to the automobile is not serious.

When a store employee started thawing out a pipe in the Bidwell store, paper caught, fire and ignited the walls at the rear end of the building. Between the walls the fire spread up the second floor, burning the woodwork badly. The total loss fire amounted to about one hundred dollars.
Chemicals were used to extinguish the blaze.

STRICKEN WOUNDED AIDED BY FRANCE; RESULT IS AMAZING

Regeneration Work Among Maimed Soldiers Brought Back From Fighting Line.

Paris, Nov. 16.—The French government recently gave facilities to The Associated Press and a party of foreign journalists to inspect some of the remarkable work which is being done on the regeneration of the ranks of stricken, crippled, maimed, and apparently hopeless wounded who are brought back from the fighting line at Chapagny.

Under the escort of French officers, the party was taken to St. Maurice, a short distance outside Paris, where wounded are brought after the physical cares of surgery have been given, to be nursed into convalescence, diverted from the loss of limb and gradually educated into some new line recreates them into useful members of society. St. Maurice is one of vast dimensions, the buildings and grounds occupying an area probably greater than Central Park in New York.

The buildings stretch as far as the eye can see, low, two-story stone structures, the walls of which are not climbing long stairs and are near the gardens, everywhere abundant with flowers and shrubbery, to lend cheer to the occupants.

One hundred more wounded are coming, said an attendant, as the officer led the way into the first building, the receiving ward.

Here they are, said the officer, pointing to 200 large glass photographic plates ranged and numbered in a case.

The photographs of the 200 wounded had been sent ahead, the plates wound and the process of making some of them being X-ray plates.

"See this one," said the officer, holding up a large glass plate showing the side-profile of a wounded soldier, with a gaping bullet-hole back of the ear, and around the nose little sutures or cracks of the skin.

"It is not a fractured skull—that would be hopeless," said the officer.
"No, that made over."

But this receiving ward was merely the first stage in a sort of ascending scale, which improved the wounded's condition at each stage until he finally landed in the school where he was made over into a perfected man useful to himself and society than he was before. It was this school that chief interest was directed.

This enormous school at St. Maurice is a hive of work shops of all kinds—shoe-making shops, machine shops, auto repair shops, blacksmith shops with forging and clothes-making shops and the two women were the wounded soldiers from the front line, minus an arm, leg or eye on which they had before depended, but did not need the new line which was a whole it was as efficient as body of workmen as one would find in any well-regulated factory. The men had studied faces, those working in groups were chatting and laughing.

Attention was also given to the fine arts and the professions, and here also were schools for sculpture and painting and architecture, so that the wounded soldiers, who were men who had a taste for the fine arts, could be led into some new line of work which did not require the use of his hand, and which was near the elbow was delicately, "mended" by means of his hand.

The soldier architects were making designs, with blue-prints of girders, and columns, and calculating the strength of walls and roofs. All of these men had something missing, but their work was so chosen as to make absolutely negligible the loss of their members, and to make what remained of their members entirely efficient for this particular work.

The soldier architects were ranged two lines of soldier typewriters, men who lost a foot or some other member, but whose hands had now been taught a skill they had not known before in rapid typewriting.

In the shoe shop the men were turning out a good grade of shoes, selling for 25 francs (about $4.50);
also wallets and purses of all kinds,
leather watch chains and belts.

Large glass cases exhibited the di-lapse of their product. It was the same in the iron shop, the blacksmith shop and all the other branches of this hive of industry.

"One soldier with both hands gone," said the officer, "is making 18 francs
a day as a day laborer."

He explained that special tools had been made for this handicapped worker, fitting on to the steel hooks instead of his hands. The plans, for carpenter, to do his work with precision, a bell ringing if pressure was too great to the right, another bell if pressure was too great on the left.

So that the handicapped soldier carpenter learned his trade automatically, bells warning him of each false move until he had become expert.

The St. Maurice institution and school which is thus making soldiers over for a new and useful occupation has a capacity of 800 men, who have remains dressed so far as remains necessary, are housed and fed, and at the same time carry on these extensive shops which turn out useful products of all kinds, and what is more turn useful men skilled in the arts, architecture, mechanical arts and the many branches of manufacture.

SEVEN DAY BAPTIST MEMBERS CELEBRATE "OLD FOLKS DAY"

Members of Milton Church Celebrate Annual Day With Special Services.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
Milton, Nov. 15.—On November 13 the S. D. Baptist church of Milton celebrated the annual "Old Folks Day." This special service was held at the church at 10 o'clock, and was a most interesting and profitable one. The church was filled with people, and the services were well attended. The pastor, Rev. J. H. Smith, gave a most inspiring sermon, and the choir sang some of the best songs. The service was a great success, and the members of the church were very happy to participate in it.

Call them not old, since neither doubts nor fears have quenched their hope throughout the long, long life.
They are not old, the days of youth have fled.
Who quaff the brimming cup of peace and joy?
They are not old who from life's hid-outlook, find draughts which still refresh but never cloy!
The secret of perpetual youth is who find delight in deeds of kindness wrought.
No age can dim the luster of their crown.
Whose days with loving ministry are fraught.

MILTON RESIDENT DIES AT MERCY HOSPITAL

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
Milton, Nov. 15.—The death of Sunday of Arthur G. Crosby at Mercy hospital, Janesville, where he underwent an operation for appendicitis last Tuesday, was a shock to the community. He has been able to be about town the Sunday before and was apparently as well as usual. Since moving to this village a few years ago he had made many friends in addition to the friendships contracted in his younger days when he was a student in the college. At the time of his death he was a member of the firm of Crosby & Summers, dealers in agricultural implements and machinery of the village. Deceased was an active and energetic business man and a kind and social circles. He leaves a wife and four young children to mourn the loss of a loving husband and father. The funeral arrangements have not been made at this time.

The Orophilian Lyceum, one of the leading men's literary societies of Milton college, held its annual banquet for the new members and friends Saturday evening in the dining hall of the Seventh Day Baptist church. The hall was tastefully decorated in red and black, the Oro colors. The symbol of the evening was football, and the placards were decorated in accordance with the idea. About thirty Oros and their families were present. Carroll B. West acted as toastmaster. F. G. Hall kicked off with a toast to "The Team," followed by H. E. Talbot on "The Backfield" and Charles Skinner on "The Line." Elwood Ormsby spoke of "The Interference," and K. B. Randolph toasted "The Coach." Miss Helen Shaw spoke for "The Rooters," and Miss Aster Davis for "The Roadsters." C. F. Gesler closed the evening's program with a toast to "Our Opponents," winding up with a Milton Orophilian yell and the song "Our Colors" by all present. Several musical numbers were given by the Orophilian quartet and by some of the feminine guests, were interspersed between the speeches.

Dreary days made cheery!

When the long and depressing rains and rawness set in, the confinement to the home may easily become unbearable—even dangerous—if the rooms, halls and bays are not constantly flooded with the soft, genial warmth of radiator heating. Dampness, drafts, cold floors and fitful room temperatures are a menace—particularly in sloppy weather when children and old folks cannot throw off the hurtful effects of indoor inactivity. You can, on sodden or zero days, make an invigorating June-day climate in your home—day and night—absolutely guaranteed with an outfit of

AMERICAN & IDEAL RADIATORS & BOILERS

In many cities and states the law now compels that all newly-built schools shall be outfitted with our ideal way of heating (all greenhouses, sanitariums and hospitals have long ago adopted and proved it to be the only perfect way). If your child is thus wisely, sanitarily protected in school, why not adopt this right way of heating in your home, since iron prices now rule so reasonable and IDEAL Boilers and AMERICAN Radiators can be so quickly and simply put into cottages, stores, churches, and other structures already built, in town or country.

No need to discard old heating devices until ready to start fire in the IDEAL Boiler—quickly put in, in the "dead of winter." IDEAL Boilers and AMERICAN Radiators are a substantial investment, as they will outlast the building. Their purchase will increase the sales and rental value of the building and they will soon repay their cost in savings in fuel, labor, repairs, and in the lessened house-cleaning and wear on carpets and furnishings. Write today for valuable book of heating facts, "Ideal Heating Investments." Six months cold weather still ahead!

THE CORN CROP.

It is pointed out by the "Wall Street Journal" that the casual reader may easily be misled in reading the department of agriculture estimate of the corn crop of 1915. The total production is placed at 3,080,500,000 bushels. The average farm price as of Nov. 1 is fixed at 61.9 cents a bushel. From this any school boy could figure out that the corn crop was worth almost $2,000,000,000. This would be important if true. But unfortunately the figures do not bear analysis.

Early in October it was pointed out in these columns that a freeze had overtaken the late crop in the upper third of the corn belt, which at that time was the stalk. The result of this would be considerable soft corn. The department, in its crop review, has literally confirmed this opinion in the following words:

"Although the corn crop bulks large, the quality is unusually poor in the principal corn surplus states and northern states where the crop was caught in the milk or dough state by an early freeze, causing much light, chaffy corn. Therefore, the actual feeding value of the crop is probably less than the production figures indicate. In the southern states, however, the quality of the crop is generally above the average."

The department also puts the quality of the entire crop at 9.7 per cent below the average.

The average farm price is that of merchantable corn, such as will pass inspection. Obviously, 9.7 per cent at least of the corn is unmerchantable, and should not be valued at the price of good corn.

Private reports show that in the northern belt considerable acreage was not harvested after the freeze, and no reduction whatever seems to be made for this abandoned acreage. Estimates of the yield per acre in some of these states are nearly forty per cent larger than the average for the whole country. This, of course, is based on the production of soft as well as merchantable corn.

It is clear that the department's return includes unmerchantable as well as market corn. The average farm price being given leads one to think that the whole crop is worth 61.9 cents. But this is the price the farmer receives for market corn only.

Soft corn is not marketed. It has little value. Business men must make their own estimates of the amount of market corn actually produced. There is no use in counting as an asset something that we do not have.

SOUND ADVICE.

Patrick Cudahy, president of Cudahy Brothers company of Milwaukee since 1884 and one of the prominent meat packers of the world, announced an retirement from active business yesterday.

"I've worked long enough," he told some friends at the board of trade, where he was a visitor. "I have turned everything over to my son. He is a good boy and can run the business. I will take life easy and tend to my greenhouses. I want to give my boy the show I didn't have as a kid."

"The young man who is going to succeed in life must work hard all the time. He mustn't be thinking of beating the clock. He must have good habits; he must never forget what his father told him and what he learned at his mother's knee. He must have perseverance and grit. He mustn't be easily discouraged. Life's a fight. It's the fighter that gets to the top. And there's just as big a chance for the right man today as there was in my time."

LIKE VERSUS BOB.

Readers of the autobiographies of both Senators La Follette and Stephenson will find the two volumes exceedingly interesting, the one explaining facts, the other glossed over by mere mention. Mr. Stephenson has issued the first chapters of the forthcoming story of his life's efforts in behalf of the republican party in Wisconsin and already Senator Bob has taken exception to certain paragraphs that have appeared in the prospectus. He says that Stephenson is not specific enough in his statements. However the readers of the printed statement of sums expended or given to La Follette or his agents, all appear specific enough in the printed story. In discussing part of the La Follette denial the Milwaukee Sentinel says: "Bob says he does not recognize money invested in Mr. Stephenson's newspaper (the Free Press) as contributions to his personal campaign."

"He must mean, of course, the money put into the Free Press before the split came. But does Bob really regard that money as a business investment? Nonsense! The money went to establish a La Follette organ—and a mighty loyal and persistent organ it was, as Mr. La Follette would gratefully admit if he had a pennyworth of the sense of gratitude in his make-up."

Senator Stephenson's autobiography opens very promisingly, and undoubtedly contain some eye opening exhibits as to the great La Follette political thimble in this badly bamboozled state. But of the book more hereafter.

STRINGENT MEASURES.

The seizure of the plant of the London Globe by the English authorities has created a mild furor throughout England where for a hundred years the Globe has been considered one of the most conservative of the said English newspapers. However, too open criticism of the government's stand on various matters relative to the conduct of the war led to the drastic action of the authorities and the Globe will doubtless remain under control until the present crisis is over.

The question is asked, what has become of the boy that used to spend all day Saturday working around the home place? Well, he's long ago grown up, and is probably now raking up the front yard while his boy goes off with the football team.

BE A BOOSTER.

This is a familiar slogan to cry out and while there is really no material reason why special attention should be called to it just at this time still it is always acceptable. Janesville and Rock county are preparing for the winter months. The holiday season is at hand. The crops have been fairly plentiful and the reports from the government and state authorities is to the effect Rock county has far ahead in pure bred horses and is a close second in cattle. This is something to boast of and with the present organizations in this line so efficiently organized it would be a good talking point. Be a booster and join in the grand chorus of praise of your home city and your county no matter where you are.

The note to England about interfering with commerce contains 20,000 words, and the average citizen is giving intelligent consideration to its arguments by reading the newspaper headlines.

The happy exemption of the United States from this awful war is probably due not so much to the superior wisdom of the American people, as to the width and wetness of the ocean lying between.

Complaints are made that the boys throw the neighbors' porch chairs off on the ground during these dark autumn evenings, but it isn't thoroughly satisfactory to the youngsters unless a chair arm or two is broken.

The newspapers of each party have now all had leading articles warning the other party of the awful warning administered them by the eight states that voted last week.

Next week is Thanksgiving and the turkeys are roosting higher and higher every night. They seem to know that the first snow always brings disaster to their species and they wish to be as safe as they can.

What with refund week sales, special sales in various stocks of good and a battle royal going on in the meat business, Janesville is certainly a busy shopping center these days.

The wise shopper has a goodly portion of his Christmas presents either all thought out or actually purchased by this time. Shop early and avoid the rush.

Some people seem to think that a company of rural militia and a few old cannon used in the Civil war would be sufficient as a defense against a modern army.

It is sometimes difficult for the newspapers to find space for election returns, but there is no difficulty about the football scores.

Why the Picnic is Failing.

When a man tells you he is going to take along a little lunch you know he means just a ham sandwich or two. When a woman makes the same remark she has in mind eight ham sandwiches, ten peanut butter sandwiches, a quart bottle of pickles, a box of crackers, six lemons, a sack of sugar, a bottle of olives, hunk of cheese, half a cake, a can of potted ham, ten dressed eggs, a box of wafers, loaf of bread and a few other trifles, including a tablecloth and bunch of napkins. OPINION OF THE WAR BY ENGLISH-GERMAN

Son of English Admiral, Who Has Become German, Gives Statement of Views.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Berlin, Nov. 16.—Houston Stewart Chamberlain, who, although the son of an English admiral, has become a German, has contributed to one of the Hamburg newspapers a statement of his views on the present and future relations between England and Germany.

He is convinced that the war between the two countries will last for at least a hundred years.

He does not mean, he explains, that the present fighting will continue for so long a time, but rather that an international struggle has commenced of which the world-war is but a phase. "The German word, Krieg," observes Mr. Chamberlain, "means much more than the English word, war," or the French guerre; it really signifies an obstinate persistence in the endeavor to accomplish some purpose. In this sense, the war between England and Germany was long feared, and every effort was made to avert it, but in the end it was wantonly brought about. Now we must steel ourselves, for the contest will be conducted the bitter after peace has been concluded as it is being conducted now."

The Germans will easily mend their relations with Italy and Russia, declares Chamberlain. France is likely to be a disturbing element, but he is convinced that force and sagacity will ultimately master that difficulty. "With England, however, the matter is different. For the struggle between England and Germany is no mere fight for physical ascendancy. Each nation wishes to secure the ascendancy for its world-philosophy. The essential aim of the English Weltanschauung is the development of the will. The German is devoted to artistically-directed knowledge and action."

"The English philosophy produces energetic able, but ignorant undisciplined individuals, whereas the German method produces great mental power in the individual and the obedient submission of all to one great purpose. Thus, the average Englishman is not nearly so well educated as the German, and is less given to reflection."

A situation has now arisen, the writer contends, which will continue until one nation subjugates the other, for the two cannot possibly live on the same footing near and with one another. Diplomatic agreements and courts of arbitration cannot in any way affect such a situation, for this is a war between two ideals of life, and it must be fought out. In war with firearms and in peace with intellectual weapons.

"There is no need for hatred in this war," says Chamberlain, "and the German may properly perceive and acknowledge all the excellent things accomplished by the English method of life and thought. "But it is impossible by any argument or proof to convince the Englishman that he and his race are not predestined to rule the earth. The only way to teach the Englishman that he is wrong is to compel him by force to recognize it. Once Germany holds the power in its hand, it can permit the English and others to follow the best of their own minds in their own sphere. But in the meantime Germany must be strong and inflexible."

WALWORTH HAS NEED OF COUNTY HOSPITAL

Provisions for County's Ill and Infirm Are Found to be Entirely Inadequate.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Delavan, Wis., Nov. 15.—There is a movement on foot with several of the supervisors of the county favorable to the erection of a modern department for the ill and infirm unfortunate at the county farm. At present the provisions are wholly inadequate for the care of the temporary or permanently indisposed patients, and indications are that early action toward the erection of such a structure be taken.

Present accommodations are not in the least keeping with modern ideas and far from being in accordance with other provisions for the proper care and comfort of those who must seek protection in this public institution. Especially is argument favorable to an asylum building that should cost upward of $25,000 since the most expensive and modern buildings to be found in the state, and for the accommodation of possibly not more than two or three prisoners in the county, although the equipment is sufficient for the care of 25 or 30, with ample and comfortable quarters for tramps, boys, and fine accommodations for female prisoners. The county has a modern and comfortable building, with running water in each cell, and similar accommodations, including an elaborate living apartment for the sheriff and his family that is the essence of extravagance for a county of this size.

At the county farm it is argued that the heating plant only recently installed is of a capacity to provide the necessary heat for the proposed infirmary, and this added cost will be eliminated.

Farmers of Walworth county face a struggle of seed corn and dairy men are showing some anxiety concerning the poor quality of silage and other roughages, but while there is hope of this phase of threatened trouble draining, and not interfering with the flow of milk at the same time there looms up on the horizon the fact that the yields of oats, barley and other grains is in unusual abundance.

The unseasonably dry weather of the past month has caused the farmers who are busying themselves with plowing, to wish for a copious downpour. They contend that a good soaking rain is needed. Likewise it is argued that the roads would be greatly benefited were there to be a good, heavy rain.

Mike the Monk.
One little look,
And all was over,
Did Mike come back?
No, nevermore.

Probably because of the war, the organ grinding business was very dull. And so our story opens. Tony Vesputti had a bright idea.

"Hah," he exclaimed in Italian. "Hah! I will dress da monk up like a Char! Chaplin an make-a da fortune!"

Which he proceeded to do, and in short order Mike the monk was arrayed in a derby hat two sizes too big, a pair of trousers four sizes too big, a little mustache two sizes too small, and a cane with a hook on the end.

"Hah," cried Tony, surveying his handiwork. "Beautiful! Exquisite! Me go bring in Pietro to take-a squint Char! Chaplin da monk!"

And he rushed out to find his friend Pietro.

Mike the monk looked down at himself, frowned, and jumped up on Tony's wash stand and grabbed up Tony's shaving mirror.

He saw himself!
Giving the end of his chain to Tony's bedpost he leaped out the window and headed himself.

HERMIT BURRITT'S WILL PROVED TODAY

Recluse Had Considerable Property on North Bluff Street and Good Amount of Cash.

The will of the late Isiah Burritt the aged recluse who died at the county asylum after being discovered ill in meager quarters by the police several months ago, was proved today in county court by the executor, Warren Andrews of Evansville as executor of his estate, considerable property holdings in this city and funds which are said to aggregate between seven and eight thousands of dollars.

Real estate owned by Burritt at 323 North High street is willed to the children of his brother, George Burritt, of Valley View. The property at 815 North Bluff street is given to his sister's daughter, Mrs. Ida Belle Haskins of this city.

The property he owned at 506 and 508 North Bluff street goes to his nephew, Schuyler Barrett, when the latter reached the age of 21. Of the cash residue remaining after his debts are paid, $200 are to go to Mrs. Mary Burritt, a relative living at Sioux Falls, S. Dakota. Providing there is any additional amount, this is willed to the niece, Ida Belle Haskins, of this city.

Full account of Burritt's finances have not been made, but it was stated that the sum will be close to that mentioned above.

BUDAPEST SHOWS FEW SIGNS OF LIFE WAR; THEATERS STILL OPEN.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Budapest, Hungary, Nov. 16.—Business, just as before the war. Cafes are thronged every night. The late-afternoon promenade along the Corso still exhibits a stream of faultlessly dressed men and women. Theatre picture shows and cabarets are enjoying apparent prosperity. The second performance of the night begins in many of them at 11 and 12 o'clock.

There is no such thing as a bread shortage for any indication that the city is in a land at war; that it experienced some months ago the near approach of the tide of war, that it really has suffered belatedly common with every belligerent capital.

"You won't find any war in Budapest," said a Budapest representative to the Associated Press representative on the train from Vienna to that city. "There is no such thing as a bread shortage for any indication that the city is in a land at war; that it experienced some months ago the near approach of the tide of war, that it really has suffered belatedly common with every belligerent capital."

The restaurants and hotels serve unadulterated wheat bread, and there is no such thing as a bread shortage for any indication that the city is in a land at war; that it experienced some months ago the near approach of the tide of war, that it really has suffered belatedly common with every belligerent capital."

The only limit to the amount of the buyer's ability to pay for it. Restaurant prices are somewhat higher than before the war, but one of the best hotels in the city serves a table d'hôte luncheon and dinner daily at three and a half crowns, barely more than half a dollar at the present rate of exchange.

ENGLAND DOES NOT INTEND LOSING THE S. AMERICAN TRADE

White Fighting John Bull Still Has His Eyes Upon the Trade With South American Countries.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

London, Nov. 16.—Great Britain has no intention of allowing the United States to oust it from first place in trade with South America, declares the Daily Chronicle in a long and earnest discussion of "The South American Market." After noting the relative positions of England, Germany and the United States in South American trade prior to the war, the article warns its readers that the United States has already accomplished a great deal in its effort to take advantage of the opening offered.

"But let us look for a moment at the assets of the British trader in South America," continues the Chronicle. "One of the greatest is his reputation for strict integrity and scrupulously honorable dealing, which will stand him in good stead in the coming race for trade. It must be maintained at all costs. South American people have had experience of our methods of business and of those of the United States, and as a general rule they prefer our own. If they can get it, they will have it."

"Another great point is our favor is the remarkably strong position of our leading banks. The names of the Anglo-South American Bank, the British Bank of South America, and the London and Brazilian Bank are known all over the world. Multinational agencies and the growth of British trade have been the result of this. Then again there is the Banca Commerciale Italiana. The entente between British and Italian interests in the South American market is of particular importance, owing to the predominance of the latter in the South American labor market."

"Consideration of our banking position leads one to speak of our shipping predominance. Our pre-eminence in South American trade in the past has been due in no small degree to the great development of our merchant marine. The United States is not to be compared with us in this respect. Our shipping is already opening branches in some of the South American centers, while her colossal activity in building warships and the sale of her warships at high prices will enable her to put money into the development of her mercantile marine."

"Another point in our favor is the large amount of British capital already invested in the various South American countries. This reaches the stupendous total of $3,750,000,000, while our annual trade in South America prior to the war, $600,000,000, or one-fifth of the total trade of those countries. Obviously, British companies will, however possible, place their orders in Great Britain. But they are not in business for their own sake. They are in business to give them what they want or they will go elsewhere."

The article goes on with a discussion of the shortcomings of British trade, but by catalogue is impossible in these columns, it declares, and it adds that there is a lamentable lack of really skilled British travelers and agents. In this respect it urges the traders to take a leaf from Germany's handbook. "Germany's travelers and agents were skilled men, and they spared neither time nor trouble. Good linguists were they, not with mere smattering of Spanish and Portuguese, but with every word of the firms in Germany leave everything to their agents. They were always making personal visits to study local commerce and credit conditions on the spot. Above all, they took care to give the importer what he wanted."

Turning specifically to the opportunities in Argentina, the Chronicle declares that the effort to secure a share here in England is to maintain commercial predominance. The last complete year's returns for this republic show that in 1913 the trade was divided as follows: England, 130 million dollars; Germany 70 millions, and the United States 62 millions.

FIRE OF UNKNOWN ORIGIN AT TOWNSEND RESIDENCE

A mysterious blaze which caused normal damage at the home of Elmer Townsend, a highwayman railway engineer, at 1400 West Main street, burned itself out yesterday afternoon.

One of the children came home from school and finding the house filled with smoke fled to the street. The father, who had just returned from out and sat upon the porch, waited the coming of her older sister. The older girl arrived shortly after and finding the smoke and thinking the fire still burning proceeded to the house and turned on the water. In the water later showed that aside from woolen clothing hung by the kitchen range to dry, and which had burned, the walls were badly scorched, and much woodwork burned. Little damage was done. Mrs. Townsend left her home early in the afternoon. Had the fire burned itself out a serious fire was possible.

JAPAN IS EXCITED OVER BRIBERY CASE

Decision of Government Not to Prosecute Official Causes a Bitter Controversy.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Tokio, Nov. 16.—The decision of the government not to prosecute Viscount Oura, the recent minister of home affairs, whom a preliminary court declared had contributed $20,000 for purposes of bribery of members of Parliament, has excited a controversy throughout Japan.

The controversy centers about Yukio Ozaki, the minister of justice, who frankly takes the responsibility upon his own shoulders, and who says: "Viscount Oura was undoubtedly guilty of bribery, but the act was prompted not by any base or selfish motive, but solely and entirely by a sincere desire to carry out the government's policy, though in unconscious disregard of the principles of the cabinet system. In consideration of this and of the fact that the minister is repentant and has resigned all political and public positions and has manifested his intention not to interfere in any way with the rest of his life, we have decided to postpone prosecution."

"Criminal punishment has the double aim of preventing repetition of an offense and warning the public against committing similar offenses. Prosecution of the ex-minister is dropped, not because he was a member of the nobility or the holder of a high office, but solely because we believe the end of the criminal code has been attained without subjecting him to punishment."

The preliminary court which found that Viscount Oura had distributed bribery money found four members of the House of Representatives to be guilty of bribery. The case centers about an attempt to buy over members of the opposition groups and induce them to vote for the government's project to increase the army or two divisions. That project was adopted by the last session of the Diet. The disclosure of bribery scandals and the subsequent resignation of Viscount Oura led to the collapse of the entire Okuma ministry. The cabinet later returned to office in a reconstructed form.

The records of the preliminary court show that Oura admitted that he had given money to various members of the opposition groups. He said that he had given money to various members of the opposition groups and that he had given money to various members of the opposition groups.

"I feared," testified Oura, "that if I proposed any expansion was rejected, might create antagonism between the army and navy and create circumstances undesirable for the country. I thought it would be better to bribe the government to make the house accept the government's bill."

It was necessary to expend money to accomplish that end. Oura continued by saying that he had not intended to bribe the government, but had merely to use the money in defending the government against attacks from the opposition.

The opponents of the decision to grant immunity to Oura contend that the law should have been allowed to run its course irrespective of the position or the so-called motives of the defendant. They declare that it is a miscarriage of justice to give freedom to the briber and hold the bribed for trial. They contend that the argument that Oura, having forsaken public life and gone into seclusion, is really more severely punished than he could have been by the law, is more sentimental than legal.

Says the Japan Times: "The plain fact is that the government has not the heart to brand as a criminal a man who, as one of its members, did what he considered to be in its interests, even to the extent of violating the law. The government's argument apparently considers that the offense has been adequately and sincerely expiated. But we can scarcely see how the government can avoid the charge of inconsistency in this action in the next session of the Diet."

The warmth of the discussion throughout the country on this question is another proof of the striking effect of the late case of public opinion in Japan, a freedom that has come from the west and is especially based on American ideas.

APOLLO CLUB HAS PLEASING PROGRAM

Dvorak Trio and Soprano Soloist Give a Delightful Recital Monday Evening.

Members of the Apollo club were entirely delighted with the recital given Monday evening at Library Hall by the Dvorak Trio, three Milwaukee young women who play the violin, cello and piano, and Mrs. Harriet Hasse-Koehler, soprano singer. The program was the second entertainment of the present season.

The selections given by the trio were most pleasing. It would be difficult to name the number most enjoyed, so uniform in excellence was the entire program. All three of the young women demonstrated their ability as artists, playing with a feeling and a sincerity which carried the audience with them. It was an opportunity to forget self and be carried along on the crest of melody.

The last group of selections by the trio seemed to be the climax of the evening's delight. "On the Banks of the Brook," Beethoven, was especially fine. It gave a wonderful opportunity for the blending of tones of the three instruments, and with its fascinating tuneful strains, so beautifully executed by the members of the trio, it stood out as worthy of special mention. Then came the Spanish dance selection with its rhythm and vivacious swing, in sharp and pleasing contrast to the former piece. The young women were persistently encored and they responded with the always acceptable "Barcarole" from the "Tales of Hoffman," which, like their entire program was given with masterful expression. The solo selections of Miss Garce Hill on the cello met with the audience's best approval. She gave "The Wild Rose," a plaintive tuneful piece, the more difficult "Liebes Frued," by Krieger, and an encore "Traumeri," a most artistic rendition.

Miss Pearl Brice gave several violin numbers and proved herself a musician of rare and studied talents. Her ease and grace of playing, charming appearance, and high class ability to present difficult selections which would test the powers of any more experienced artist, met with instant approval from the audience. Miss Hewitt, the pianist, who played the accompaniments as well as taking her part in the trio, was a player of high merit, with a magnificent touch and a wonderful musical sense. One found himself listening for the piano notes.

Mrs. Harriet Hasse-Koehler, soprano, was also a favorite, and her share of the program was received with warm welcome. She has a beautiful lyric soprano voice, clear strong and well trained. She sang the high notes without the least sign of strain, was unaffected, and in addition articulated plainly. She gave but one dramatic selection, "The Air de Semeur," from the opera "Herodias," but it was sufficient to demonstrate her ability along that line. Her other selections were lighter, pleasing little songs, which closed with one by Carrie Jacobs-Bond, "Happy Lil' Sal," happily and effectively sung.

If It Pleases Him. The fellow who jumps out of the frying pan into the fire may be justified in thinking he is hot stuff.

MARY PICKFORD IN ROLE OF 'ESMERALDA'

Frances Hodgson Burnett's Play Seen in Picture Form at the Apollo.

In "Esmeralda" at the Apollo yesterday, Mary Pickford was as usual a charming and love-winning little actress from the moment she folds up her bit of a muff in a newspaper for safe keeping, till the moment she surprises her cornshock man with a kiss. She bubbles with natural humanness, attractive personality, and that's why her audience follows her celluloid experiences with interest almost as great as though they were their own.

Fuller Melish, as the downtrodden husband, and sympathizing father, does a deal of thoroughly commendable work, with the deft ease of the assured artist.

Amusements

Notices furnished by the Theatres AT THE APOLLO.

"The Melting Pot" Tonight. "The Melting Pot," Israel Zangwill's drama will be presented at the Apollo Theatre tonight and Wednesday in visual form, with Walker Whiteside depicting the same role on the screen as he originated on the stage. This subject has aroused unusual interest and laudable comment because of the able way the producers handled it for the screen and its appeal to American patriotism.

It is most interesting, indeed, that this play, which makes the United States a haven for the foreign oppressed, was written by an Englishman and appeared in theaters in continental Europe before the war. It is distinctly an American drama and contrasts vividly the freedom enjoyed by American citizens against the oppression suffered by foreigners, especially in Russia.

The United States is pictured as the crucible of the universe to which the downtrodden from other nations come to be molded in the great melting pot into the true type of the American. The American flag which closes the play never has been used more appropriately to wind up an American play than in this patriotic picture.

"Melting Pot" revolves around the destiny of a young Russian who lost his parents in a pogrom in his native country and migrated to America. Here he becomes a successful musician and is inspired to compose a symphony, its theme being "United States love." Here, also he meets and falls in love with the daughter of the man who was at the head of the massacre in which the musician lost his relatives. A powerful dramatic situation develops from this circumstance and enables the star and his leading woman, Valentine Grant, to demonstrate their emotional ability.

AT THE PRINCESS. J. Warren Kerrigan Coming Wednesday.

For Wednesday the Princess announces J. Warren Kerrigan in "A Life at Stake." This story, written and produced by Jacques Jaccard, is highly interesting, like other Kerrigan subjects. A man from the city poisons the mind of the rancher's wife against her husband, but through a chance meeting the woman learns that she is mistaken and she returns to her husband. Warren Kerrigan makes the rancher's part attractive, and one to be in sympathy with, while Hazel Buckam is his wife. Others are Helen Leslie, Buck Connors and Robert Myles. The scenes and photography are respectively pretty and clear.

AT THE MAJESTIC.

Like a Trip to the South-land. Like a trip to the South-land is this dashing six-act Vitaphone romance "Captain Alvarez." It is like a sojourn in the lands of waving palms, the lands of intriguing politicians and dusky women, where romance is in the very air, and adventure is a matter of everyday life.

It is the romance of a gallant young American who shows the scoffers how to tame a wild horse, and of a coquettish belle, and of men high in social and political life in the republic. Edith Storey, who starred in "The Island of Regeneration" and "The Christian," plays the part of the girl, and she plays it with the skill of a Taylor plays the man, and you cannot help but admire him. Altogether it is six reels of most delightful romance. Performances begin tonight at 7:30 and 9:00. Tomorrow picture will be shown tomorrow also, at 2:30, 4:00, 7:30 and 9:00.

AT MYERS THEATRE.

The "Lady Luxur" orchestra will be under the personal direction of Signor A. DeNovellis, who will interpret such luring melodies as "When I'm with You," "Dancing with the Girl From Home," "Those Awful Tattle-tales," "Lady Luxur," "Hi There," "Kiss Me Once More," "Pick a Pickin'," "Dream on My Princess," "Written for You," "Book of the Day," "When I Sing in Grand Opera," "Longing for You," and "That Rag-tag Dance."

"Lady Luxur" has more plot than the average musical comedy and a brief outline might prove interesting. Eloise Van Cuyler is introduced a few minutes before she is to attain her majority. She has been kept a simple maid by her crusty old uncle, one of the provisions of her father's will being that she shall obey him implicitly. Eloise has long nursed a secret desire to blossom as a butterfly, and unknown to her uncle, has invited all her friends to a week's fete. They are to be entertained by a famous Russian dancer, and she arrives with her courage and all her jewels that have been given her by admirers. The crusty old uncle is highly incensed at the invasion, but agrees to take care of the dancer's jewels.

Unfortunately they disappear and she thinks that they have been stolen. Various persons are accused, including the uncle, who remains in hiding to escape his niece's guests, but finally matters are straightened out satisfactorily and everything ends happily. "Lady Luxur" will appear with metropolitan all star cast, at Myers Theatre, Friday, Nov. 19.

AT THE MAJESTIC.

The $1000 Prize Photoplay. Selected as the 1000 prize winner from among thirty-five hundred stories entered in the contest, Elaine Sterne's "The Sins of the Mothers" must necessarily be a wonderful play. Added to that, the fact that Ralph Ince was chosen to direct the film production, and was given such players as Anita Stewart and Earle Williams to interpret it, gives "The Sins of the Mothers" a place among the finest pictures ever produced.

It tells the dramatic story of a girl's inherited love for gambling. Anita Stewart is given a role in which she is exquisite. All of her beauty, and all of her skill as an actress, are brought forth. If you admire her see this play. Earle Williams also, as her husband, distinguishes himself with wonderful work.

This production will be shown on Thursday and Friday of this week.

Old Age.
"Old age," said John Burroughs, the great naturalist, "is not so much a bugaboo after all. He is, in many ways, better to live with than youth, because he leaves you more at your ease; you are in the calmer waters; the fret and fever of life have greatly abated. Old age brings the philosophical mind; he brings a deeper, wider outlook upon life; he brings more tolerance and charity and good will. I did not squander my youth in excesses, and hence I am not bankrupt in my old age."

You Can't Brush Or Wash Out Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning, most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and clogging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

The Heart of Night Wind

A Story of the Great Northwest

By VINGIE E. ROE

Illustrations by Ray Walters

Copyright by Dodd, Mead and Company.

With eager haste she sat down at her typewriter and began to write. When she had finished an hour later, after long intervals of study, there lay under her hand a very creditable brief of the famous Whitby case—a verbatim copy of President Whitby's last letter, a concise history of Walter Sandry's life since college, the notes in the red morocco book, plainly specified as his delicious words, and a copy of this letter to Musselhorn. Taken together, they made a chain of deductions so plain and simple as to be condemning evidence.

At that moment Sandry himself, stepping near the south window, called her to come out and see the Siletz squaws with their pyramids of baskets going down to Toledo. At his voice she laid a jealous hand over the papers, hurriedly pushed them back for safety, and rose. But Fate, that had been waiting, gave opportunity to the cautious motion and showed them a little too far back, so that they hung in the small space between the typewriter stand and the wall—hung tentatively until the wind from the closing door, which, as if it, too, were in conspiracy, did not latch, caught them and pulled them down to the clean, rag-carpeted floor.

"Come, Siletz," called Sandry as they started for the road to intercept the basket-bearers, but Siletz, sitting in the west door with her chin in her cupped palms, shook her head.

The heat was intense for the coast country, dry and brilliant, and the hills were blue as turquoise. She watched Sandry and Miss Ordway for a long time as they picked among the treasures from the tide-lands, and presently they fell in with the small, brown women and all disappeared around the bend in the Siletz road.

The aching fury began to rise in her at thought of those two, alone, leaving the women, idling back together. Perhaps they would climb the hills for a way, and sit together—perhaps—but here the sadness fell upon her that said she was unworthy.

Had he not kissed her, and was she not his woman? His eyes were true, and they had spoken things that bade her be calm. Not yet had she learned the lesson of his greatness that kept him always so quiet and sane, even in trouble.

There came a step beside her, a soft step padding on the worn, bare floor, and Coosnah came from the east porch, panting with the heat. He leaned against the jamb of the door to the little south room, scratching luxuriously, and promptly jumped as the door swung swiftly inward. Again

The Young Commissioner Was Unusually Searching His Offices.

Fate smiled impishly and sent at that auspicious moment the first good breeze of the warm day sucking up the valley. It caught the papers on the floor under the typewriter table, fluttered them daintily, and with a whistle and whop bore them tumbling out across the sweat boards of the eating-room floor, to lodge against the rocker of Ma's little chair.

The girl in the doorway turned, reaching out a half-unwilling hand to save her rival's property. Not yet had Siletz learned a tenth of Sandry's code, also she would have folded the packet and laid it aside.

Instead, with the freedom of camp life and under innocence, she began to read, wondering at first, then, as she saw Sandry's name, with hushed breath and parted lips. When she had finished the first part she paused and stared out across the sloping lift of meadow, already serene and brown with the summer heat, puzzled, but half comprehending, yet filled with a nameless fear, she felt her fingers shaking as she turned the page to Sandry's letter.

Daily's Camp, Toledo, July 23, 13—John H. Musselhorn—The time of restitution has begun. As you made the structure of my father's fortune but a gutted and empty shell, you alone have the knowledge and the cunning to fill it to its former substance, unknown to the outside world. With Siletz gone, but his pride remains, and it must be upheld. Here is the deed to the Meadowlands Farm which you sold, squandering the money. Put it in my name as part of the Sandry estate. No matter what you have to face to get it—get it. It is a threat. Remember that those proofs, which you and your accomplice thought destroyed, are safe in my possession.

"From time to time you will be called upon to manage the buying back of every piece of property every horse on the breeding farms, every stock and bond that you, under the power-of-attorney which an honorable and trusting old man invested in you when he could no longer be about, sold—for your own profit."

Through travel and bloody sweat I kept my faith in ignorance of his ruin until his death.

As I had no mercy on James H. Whitby for his share with you in the infamous legitimate deals which made William Sandry an unconscious pauper, so will I have no mercy on you who know what I know, and shake in your shoes because of it. So far so good. I shall expect the deed to the Meadowlands Farms as speedily as it can be arranged.

WALTER SANDRY.

Trembling with premonition of disaster to Sandry, Siletz sat holding the strange documents. A great anger began to well in her against the other woman. She opened the buttons of her blue shirt and dropped the folded packet inside its blouse.

On the Siletz road Sandry and Miss Ordway were strolling back. They stopped a moment at the forked stick, and Poppy Ordway dropped Sandry's letter, resealed, into the sack before his very eyes. It was a daring thing to do and it set her blood leaping for joy in her own coolness. When they reached the camp she went directly to her room.

It was a long time before she came out again, and Sandry had gone. When she did she stood in the doorway and looked at Siletz, white and filled with a towering anger, and Siletz, looked back as white. They were women, pure and simple, and they matched in that moment their wit and their strength. Miss Ordway knew by that look that Siletz had those papers—more, that she knew their contents—but she dared not say a word. If the girl should show them to Sandry, should destroy them—She was almost on the point of flinging herself upon the slim, dark creature, risen along the doorpost, and fighting for possession of her property. But there was something sickening in the steady glint of those dark eyes, in the half-wild crouch of the slender body, and she only stood and held to the intel, consumed with a wrath that could have killed.

But the wrath of Siletz was worse—it would have killed, forgetful of the Preacher, whose word had been her simple law of life, forgetful of Sandry, who had become her pattern in his sanity and judgment.

With an effort the woman moistened her lips.

"Did—did you find—a bunch of—letters?" she asked between her gripping teeth.

And Siletz, for the first time in her life, choked down her literal fear of domination and lied.

"Lord, forgive me," she whispered first, and then, "No."

CHAPTER XXIV.

"Fight! Fight Like Hell!" So began veiled hostilities between these two. At first Miss Ordway covered her fury with a smile and tried every art of conciliation, but Siletz held far from her. Night and day she kept the packet in her breast, though for what end she did not know. She knew only with her unfailing instinct that it must never go east to the cities, or infinite harm would befall Sandry. Also, as unfailingly, the same instinct warned her not to show them to him, even though their possession might mean his safety. The primal cunning of woman kept her from being Hittling or betraying her rival.

Sandry was becoming more and more anxious about the East Belt. More and more he feared the contingency of having to fall back upon a woman for help at the last, and this was particularly galling to his manhood.

It had become a personal question with him, the "getting" of Hampden. The timber at the north was running better than they had expected, and Daily and Collins with the lumberjacks from Sacramento and the Sierras were doing splendidly. Still the magnificent belt was the Dillingworth's future and it was in grave jeopardy.

From time to time he ran across Hampden along the shores of the backwater, at Toledo, or on the Siletz road. Here the Yellow Pines owner often rode to meet Miss Ordway who had lessened her efforts in his direction since he had given her all the material she needed for his own undoing. He was more wild about her than ever, and added to his enmity for Sandry the mighty spur of suspicious jealousy.

So July dragged out in blue heat and August blazed down upon the hills.

The eastern lawyer at Salem was ready to give up in despair. Not one of the points showed itself whereon he could hang a thread of evidence; and one day Sandry, sitting on the east porch, shook the heart into Miss Ordway's throat.

"I believe I will write to New York for the great Farnsworth," he said; "it's a mighty risk, for he'll bankrupt me if he comes, though it's hardly likely he'll bother. They don't know the chances for big work out here."

And the woman shut her teeth hard, while the blood left her face in pale anger. Siletz, on the step, played with Coosnah's ears and she, too, lost a bit of color.

The next day Miss Ordway made a flying trip to Salem, stopped over a train, and went on to Portland. There she sought out the most well-thought-of legal firm in the city and was closeted for three hours in its private offices.

She was much too shrewd to trust the great scheme in the hands of a Salem firm. But here she had bungled after all, for her newly allied lawyer, a fine-looking, open-faced individual, followed her to Salem on the next train, bearing copies of her mysteriously obtained proofs of Hampden's guilt, which were as good as warrants for his arraignment and that of the amorous young commissioner.

The "ring" was wider than she had any conception of and reached far throughout the state.

She was not half over the Coast Range on the one-horse railroad when her lawyer laid the copied papers on the commissioner's private desk.

"It's come at last," he said tensely; "somebody's leaked."

And in a lightning flash the commissioner knew what had become of his account book and the missing letters from Hampden.

He slumped in his chair, drumming with senseless fingers on its arm.

He saw black bars across the window with the waving trees beyond, and knew himself for that weakest among men, a woman's tool.

So, filled with excited determination to beat Sandry with the Hampden case and forestall his sending for Farnsworth, which was the last thing she wanted, Poppy Ordway again rode up the valley. The mighty bills were silent in the deadlock of an Oregon summer. No breath of wind found its way into the sheltered valleys and the pines were still.

The tidewater slough was gray with the inland brine.

"Glorious!" she said to herself, lifting her gaze to the hazy mountains. "And I'll save it for him—even against his will!"

She was sure she had succeeded in her mission, and, happy in the knowledge, was eager to be out of the hired rig.

And Sandry, as he assisted her out, thought simply that she was the most beautiful woman in the world.

for all the 35¢ of triumph test sparks to her lovely features, deepened the slumbrous blue of her eyes.

No word had ever been spoken about that night at the railway and Sandry bore a sense of guilt that he had taken her avowal without open reciprocation. But the face of Siletz held him back. He scorned himself and yet he knew he was blameless, save for that unguarded kiss in the glade.

But did he wish to reciprocate? He did not know.

Daily's camp droned on—getting out its logs, flooding them down the slough, binding them slowly into the now familiar ocean-going raft.

The foreman himself was unchanged, though the world had changed for him since that miserable "Yes" of Siletz in the darkened room when he laid a gentle hand on her shoulder. To Sandry he was the same, for he had come, through the slow processes of the simple nature, to be his friend. The elusive fineness that had shown plain to Sandry from the first in John Daily's heart was solid as a rock, a foundation, an abutment.

They watched Hampden's trail grow toward the East Belt with an exaggerated slowness, a haunting of security.

Money-Making Ways of Using Want Ads

No. 17—How to Find Servants or Find Domestic Positions

The most persistently misunderstood field in the world is probably domestic service. The housewife imagines that all the capable maids married years ago, and the girls themselves fancy that employers are exacting, heartless wretches.

Lack of Want Ad knowledge is responsible for most of this want of understanding.

To both employers and employees in the domestic field, we have these timely suggestions to offer:

HOW TO FIND A POSITION
WANTED—POSITION BY German girl who is anxious to get into a good home. Can do general housework, including cooking. Best references. Willing to stay permanently with right family. Address—

COMMENT
Do not ask for or look for a superhuman being. The right girl can be found, and permanency and a good home are the best inducements.

HOW TO FIND A SERVANT
MAID WANTED—PERMANENT—home in right place. Three in family; laundress employed once a week. I after-noon a week. Good wages and a good home. Must bring references. Address—

Employed and Employers Make All the Problems to the Help Situation

The ordinary Want Ad relating to domestic help is too brief. Say what you will do. Say only what you intend to do.

If the girl, chaffer, butler, gardener or other servant does not come up to the mark, keep on advertising. Or, if the place you get is not what you wished to secure, advertise so you may call on your days off duty.

WOMAN'S PAGE

Married Life on $80 a Month

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"It is hard for an empty bag to stand up straight," I tell you Frank. He knew what he was talking about when he said that." John Sumner swung into the room and savagely banged the door behind him.

"What's happened?" asked Julia. "Osgood looking up from her work."

"I can hardly say that anything has happened, but I know that I am plunged in a bath of suspicion every time I have anything to do with Tyler," John walked excitedly up and down the room. "I wish I never need to see him again."

"I can't see why he effects you so. What do you care what he thinks; he's nothing to you," replied the girl.

"I know it. I am furious with myself when I see how he affects me. I hate such a thin-skinned, sensitive to every atmosphere, but I feel like a whipped cat before him and he knows it. I do manage to keep a check on him and keep him from coming into the room. I just know I feel, though; that's the worst of it." John's tone was bitter.

"Well, I'd get the better of it if I were you. Just keep the thought in your mind, 'He is hurting me,' and keep the 'cold bath of suspicion' out," advised the girl.

"I am not so sure he can't hurt me, though," John had seated himself by the time and was moodily leaning his head on his hand. "He is hurting me in the boss and I know I'm none too popular in that quarter."

There was silence for some time; then Julia said:

"Well, you are getting out of debt. You will feel like a different man when you are free from that grind. Before, indeed, it will be some time before that happy day comes. I can't possibly pay more than twenty dollars a month; that's a fourth of my salary. Have you figured out how long it will take for me to be free at that rate? Three hundred dollars is a mighty big pile for a man with my resources to raise all right."

"You're right there," replied Julia, "but hang to it; everything has to come to an end some time."

"That's what we intend to do. Molly's helping all she can now."

"You'll make it then. It is twice as easy with two working together," was Julia's cheerful response as she pinned on her hat preparatory to leaving.

When John stepped into the sloppy, uncomfortable street the early winter dark had fallen and the few lamps along the street cast a sickly yellow patch of light into the murk. He thrust his hands into his pockets and turned his face homeward.

"Now, see here," he said, giving himself a mental shake. "You stiffen up and be a man. You can't go home and worry Molly with your depression." And he straightened his shoulders and quickened his lagging steps.

Molly looked pale and depressed at supper, though she tried to seem cheerful.

"What is it?" he asked anxiously.

"I have a bad headache. I shall be all right in the morning. It has been a hard day," she answered, and watched him anxiously.

"It would be about as likely to have her get sick now when our hands are tied with these debts and we have none left to bless ourselves with," he thought moodily.

Household Hints

GETTING READY FOR THANKSGIVING.

This may seem a trifle early for this item, but forewarned is forearmed.

To serve eight people with Thanksgiving dinner for four dollars:

Tomato Soup Bread Sticks
Roast Chicken with Dressing
Mashed Potatoes Gravy
Cranberry Sauce Baked Squash
Vegetable Salad Jelly
Preserves Pumpkin Pie
Cheese Coffee Candy

Cost of menu—Soup, two cans at 10c; chicken, 85c; cranberries, 15c; potatoes, 15c; squash, 20c; vegetable salad, 30c; pumpkin, 10c; candy, 15c; cheese, 30c; eggs, 20c; milk, 15c; total, $4.95.

To Prepare Duck for Thanksgiving—Remove internal organs. Save liver, gizzard and heart. After singeing duck rub with a brush all over with hot soapy water. Rinse several times in cold water. If very hot, cover with cold water and let stand for an hour. Add one-half teaspoon soda.

Then rinse in fresh water, fill well with good poultry stuffing, sew up opening, rub all over with salt, sprinkle with pepper and dredge well in flour. Sprinkle back, tie legs securely to body, turn neck back inside skin.

Place in roasting pan and lay across top several strips of bacon or salt pork. Pour a cupful of boiling water in pan and put in oven, basting frequently until well browned. Then reduce heat, cover up tightly, finish cooking slowly.

Pot Roast of Fresh Pork—Take from one to six pounds of pork cut from the shoulder, without bone. Wash well, place in small cooking pot and add one-half teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon paprika, one-fourth teaspoon sage, one-half teaspoon of table relish, and one large onion. Place over very low flame with lid on, and cover the meat, after it starts to simmer, with boiling water. This should be enough water to cook the meat done if it isn't cooked too fast.

Gravy—Pour off all but about a cupful of fat; add to this an equal quantity of flour; stir constantly over the fire until brown, then pour in gradually boiling water to the desired consistency and cook three or four minutes; season to taste.

Pot Roast of Fresh Pork—Take from one to six pounds of pork cut from the shoulder, without bone. Wash well, place in small cooking pot and add one-half teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon paprika, one-fourth teaspoon sage, one-half teaspoon of table relish, and one large onion. Place over very low flame with lid on, and cover the meat, after it starts to simmer, with boiling water. This should be enough water to cook the meat done if it isn't cooked too fast.

Pork Chops With Stuffing—Take nice pork chops of right size for serving; season with salt, pepper and sage, place in hot spider in which a little fat has been melted. After cooking well on one side turn over. Now have the mix of stuffing made as for fowl, with an onion cut fine, and made in flat cakes size of the chops. Place a cake on each piece of meat and brown in oven. Be careful not to cook the meat too much, as it can be taken up and the cakes finished in the spider, if necessary.

Mock Beef Tongue—Lean raw beef, 3½ pounds minced fine, six square crackers, butter size of egg, cream, one-half cup; three eggs; four teaspoons salt; 2½ teaspoons pepper. Warm butter and mix all together, mold into two halves, put in pan. Bake 1½ hours. Baste with water and butter, browning both sides. When cold, slice thin. Very nice for lunch.

English Scones—Six ounces flour, two ounces sugar, two ounces butter and lard, one teaspoon baking powder. Mix flour, sugar and baking powder together; roll butter and lard well in, then mix to a stiff dough with buttermilk or sour milk. Roll out about an inch thick, cut in rounds and bake in nice hot oven. English flour is not quite so heavy as the flour in this country, so use a little less than what is called for.

Mexican Rice—Cook together one cup boiled rice and one cup tomatoes. Add chopped red pepper and an onion slice of walnut, two table-spoons sugar, one teaspoon salt, butter size of egg. Cook until onion is tender. Turn into baking dish, cover with bread crumbs, using half of the butter on top. Bake twenty-five minutes.

HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

When you feel "run down" you generally think you need a tonic. Maybe your doctor thinks so too; and then again perhaps he will take the trouble to determine what runs you down.

Just what is a tonic? We don't know, although we have prescribed barrels and boxes of tonics in our time. Patients will have their tonic whether they need it or not. A tonic is the only way to hold some patient until one has an opportunity to study them a little and determine what treatment, if any, they really require. If a doctor were to tell the truth all the time he would have to retire from practice; people simply would have the plain truth. They feel so sure they need a tonic.

Presumably a tonic tones the system, whatever that may mean. We fancy the popular idea is that a tonic puts the "pen" into the tired business man, gives him vigor and makes him a new life and makes ailing folk in general sit up and scan the headlines. Some tonics undoubtedly do these things temporarily. A few doses of strychnine will excite, signs of vitality in almost any person not utterly moribund, but that is as far as the effect goes. Of all the sadly abused drugs employed in the preparation of all-around tonics, strychnine is the cheapest, the most reprehensible and the least necessary. Indeed it is an undebatable fact that strychnine, except for rare emergencies in the doctor's hands, is the one ingredient of tonics that never by any possibility adds anything to the strength, vitality or well being of the body. It does what a whip does to a tired horse, climbing a long steep hill—if you can sympathize with a horse under such circumstances.

There are three occasions when a

Taking a Tonic Seriously. doctor prescribes a tonic: 1. When he desires to retain the patient pending a diagnosis. 2. When the patient wants a tonic and the doctor hasn't time to explain what the medicine is for. 3. When the persuasive drug agent assumes the position of preceptor to the family physician.

Any one complaining of "that tired feeling" or a "run down condition" should not take a tonic too seriously.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

The Eye Tooth. I have been to two doctors, writes Mrs. H. W. W., who suffers from nocturnal attacks of difficult breathing. The first thought it was my stomach. The second examined me with his instrument and told me it was my heart. It palpitates and flutters at times too. But my teeth are very, very bad, and the doctor wants me to have them treated by the dentist. Would it be wise to do so?

Answer—By all means. You have a good doctor on the job. Do what he tells you if you want to get better.

Heart and Home Problems

Letters May Be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of The Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a married woman and have five small children. There is one fault my husband has which almost breaks my heart. Whenever my sisters or my sisters-in-law come over he runs me down behind my back. And he puts his arms around them when he thinks I am not near to see.

Several times I have caught him in the act, and later when the girls they tell me about it. My husband denies it and says that I am jealous. It hurts me awfully, and so please tell me what to do. I really feel ashamed of him. Otherwise he is good to me. If he acted that way in my presence, I would not hurt so much.

A WORRIED WIFE. Your husband's conduct is decidedly vulgar and gives you cause to be ashamed. He is not alone to be blamed, though. If your sisters and sisters-in-law had reserve and showed that they did not like what he does he would not do it. Most self-respecting girls would stay away rather than subject themselves to such treatment. The best thing for you to do is to treat the matter as a joke. When the girls tell you things laugh them off and pretend to know all about them. If the girls were kindly they would not go to you with things that hurt.

SUFFRAGETTES PLANNING CONVENTION CAMPAIGNS DESPITE THE DEFEATS.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—In every one of the hundreds of congressional districts in the United States today, the women are in convention framing their local fight to pledge Democratic and Republican national convention delegates to favor national suffrage planks in the party platform.

These local conventions are under the general national direction of Mrs. Medill McCormick of Chicago, an official of the National American Woman Suffrage Association. The suffragists in each district will pledge their support to pro-suffrage delegates. Much time will be spent interviewing candidates. In states where national party delegates are chosen by state convention, the suffragists will concentrate upon pro-suffrage county delegates.

"Suffragists in every state in the union," said Mrs. McCormick, "will make it a point to have big demonstrations in the home town of every candidate for the house of the senate. This campaign launched today is but the minor prelude to the big fight we are going into for national suffrage this winter."

One of my friends takes exception to the doctrine of the so-called "new efficiency," which concerns housekeeping.

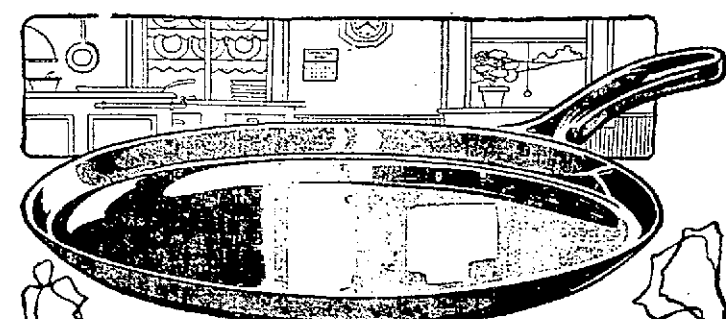

"It is all very well for these women to write that a woman should have a schedule for everything," she says. "But there are times when a woman simply can't keep to a schedule. This afternoon, for instance, I must go to town, with the lamp for my coffee percolator. It refused to light this morning and I went to all the shops near home in hope of getting it fixed. It needs a new wick, one man told me, and he told me that there was just one place to get it, and that meant a trip into the heart of the city. I spent more than an hour this morning, and even now the end is not in sight. Like as not the man in town will send me somewhere else. They always do."

PICKING GIANTS TO MEET JESS WILLARD

Frank Moran Meets Logical Candidate to Meet the Champion—Fulton May Show Strength.

(By George R. Holmes.)
New York, Nov. 16.—The recent and widely heralded announcement by Jess Willard that he will defend the title he won from Jack Johnson next March has brought to light another situation akin to that of several years ago when Johnson was in his prime. And that is that there is no heavy weight looming up on the pugilistic horizon capable of giving the champion a real championship battle.

Since Willard barred the blacks, it leaves but seven men who even by stretching several miles of points can be considered contenders. Of these, perhaps Frank Moran of Pittsburgh, stands the best show, but ring men consider it a mighty poor best.

Moran's chief claim to fame is that he held Johnson off for 12 rounds, and that he knocked out Jim Coffey in three rounds. There was a suspicious odor to that Johnson affair in Paris, which has never lifted, and his showing against Coffey, even while he knocked him out, was not impressive.

The Rosecommon giant was busily engaged in building up a victory on points when Frank slipped over his sleep kisser. Then there is that tremendous handicap in size. Willard would stand a full head taller than Moran, could reach four inches farther and have a big advantage in the weight.

Frank's best friends do not claim he is a boxer. And Willard's worst enemies will have to concede that Jess is a very clever fighter for a big man.

Coffey has a claim, which eliminates him. Fred Fulton, the Minnesota Giant, is clamoring for recognition. Fulton's claim to fame is his size and the fact that he knocked out Arthur Peck.

About the only ones that haven't knocked out Arthur are those who haven't fought him. Fulton should meet and lick such men as Coffey, Weir, Jack Dillon, Tom Cowley, Gunboat Smith and three or four others before he can really claim to be a topnotcher.

Gunboat Smith's star is fast setting. Charles Weiner, who is the Ganner last summer, and Charles in turn lost twice to Jack Dillon by big margins, once by a two-round kayo.

Tom Cowley is a big man, dug out of the wilds by Jim Corbett, but he is as yet untried against good men. Less, it appears, is the king of all the surveys.

COLLECTING FISH EGGS FOR PROPAGATION WORK IN STATE HATCHERIES

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Madison, Wis., Nov. 16.—The Wisconsin conservation commission is collecting brook and lake trout eggs for propagation in the hatcheries of the state. This is in spawning season for these members of the trout family. About forty men have been working on fishing tugs, running out of the ports on the Great Lakes collecting the eggs.

They are catching and about 250,000 trout eggs to the bushel, and of about 50,000,000 eggs. The department expects to collect 100,000,000 whitefish, blue fish and herring eggs in December.

HOME COMING PLANS FOR "GOPHER" GAME

Result of Clash With Minnesota Much In Doubt—Students at Madison Still Have Hopes.

Madison, Nov. 16.—The Official program of the homecoming at the University of Wisconsin has been announced for Friday night and all day Saturday. A grand torchlight parade will commence at six-fifteen o'clock Friday evening, followed by a huge mass meeting at seven o'clock. The big event for Friday night will be the joint musical concert by the Wisconsin and Minnesota musical clubs.

Saturday marks one of the biggest planned homecomings in the history of the university. At nine o'clock the intercollegiate championship football match will be staged at Camp Randall. Starting at nine o'clock and until one, alumni will register at Music hall. A monster parade will be commenced promptly at ten o'clock from the gym for the C. M. & St. Paul station, where special trains carrying old grads will be met. It is expected these trains will arrive about 10:45 o'clock.

The dedication of the new stadium at Camp Randall, the first shovel of dirt to be dug by Athletic Director George M. Ehler, will mark the big event of the day; an event that will be remembered. The new stadium will be erected just behind the present gridiron site, where a natural hill will serve as a spot for the concrete seats.

The plan is to have the majority of game visitors at the Camp as early as possible. At this time the west-east cross-country competition will be decided. At two o'clock the kick-off that marks the opening of the Badger-Gopher struggle will be made. So dance at eight-thirty at the gym are planned.

A large button campaign for homecoming day commenced this morning. Thousand buttons are to be disposed of at twenty-five cents each, and are being sold by wearers of the "W."

Gopher Game In Doubt.
The sort of attack Coach Williams will present against the Badgers Saturday is in doubt. Wisconsin has mastered Chicago and Illinois and has mastered the Rockford team, which Illinois used some. Minnesota worked out this famous shift some years ago with good results.

The wonderful showing of Taylor at quarterback against Illinois has convinced Coach Juncos that this little player has more stuff than he knew of before. The little general gave and showed more than did the big Simpson. It is likely that Taylor will take charge of Buck and company against the Gophers Saturday. Evers will be in shape and Smith is suffering little from the Sucker battle. Ferguson may get a chance and Kreuz will play fullback, is the prediction. At any rate, students look for a close game with a victory in doubt.

Students are optimistic over the coming struggle and are evidently with the team, as shown by the spirit manifested in the gymnasium last Saturday night and by the telegram sent to Captain Buck at Urbana between halves, encouraging the team on. Tickets are selling fast. Mail orders were opened for the first time this morning and tickets returned to the purchasers. Camp Randall will be a scene of the construction of additional bleachers to take care of the record crowd that is anticipated Saturday.

CHAMPION OUTBOXES CANADIAN LIGHTWEIGHT

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Winnipeg, Nov. 16.—Freddie Welsh, champion lightweight, outboxed Johnny O'Leary, claimant for the Canadian title, in twelve rounds of fast boxing Monday night. Welsh's lightning left jab held off the Canadian all the way.

New York, Nov. 16.—Johnny "Kewpie" Erlie, the St. Paul claimant for the bantam title, won all the way in rounds of milling with Young Solberg here last night.

Moore is Victor.
Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 16.—Pal Moore of Nashville, outboxed Pat Herman and won the decision in eight rounds last night. Both are bantams.

Dillon to Battle.
Oshkosh, Nov. 16.—Jack Dillon, light heavyweight champion, will meet Frank Farmer here next Tuesday night. Farmer, who dropped Clabby recently, is in good shape to meet the "Hoosier mauler."

"PRO" CHARGES ARE MADE AGAINST GEO. SIMPSON

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Madison, Wis., Nov. 16.—George Simpson, star tackle on the Wisconsin University football team, was today charged by E. B. Swenson of the River Falls State Normal school with accepting money for refereeing three games of basketball at River Falls last winter. Director of Athletics Elmer of the Wisconsin University will lay this and other evidence bearing on the charge of professionalism made by Professor Paige of Minnesota against Simpson before the athletic council for action before the game with Minnesota here next Saturday.

With the exception of Reiser, who is still nursing three fractured ribs, all of the Badger squad reported for the first practice of the week at Camp Randall this afternoon and ran through a short, snappy signal drill behind closed gates.

Like some eastern rowing coaches, Instructor Conner of the University of Washington reports a scarcity of material for both the varsity and freshmen eight-oared crews. Only nine freshmen weighing more than 150 pounds have reported for fall work. Five varsity men will be missing from last season's crew.

MORRIS MILLER

Cubans are said to be sore over the poor patronage extended the Havana Reds in their tour of the states last spring and as a result the next ball team from the United States that visit the island will get the cold shoulder in return.

In confirming the announcement that the White Sox had obtained Pitcher Shackleford and Outfielder Chappell from Milwaukee it was stated by an official of Coudrey's club that Nemo Leibold would not be one of the players sent to Milwaukee in exchange.

When the official statement of attendance is made by the American League it will, in all probability, be found that the Washington team, for the third consecutive time, again proved the best attraction on the road during the past season. In 1914 the records showed that the Nationals outdrew all its rivals on the road to the extent of $18,000.

While this figure may not be equaled this year, there is every reason for believing that the Griffins again led the league in this respect, despite the fact that the weather during the early part of the campaign proved a serious handicap.

The release of George Moriarty, veteran of the Detroit team, did not come as a surprise. Moriarty's playing days in a major league have long since been ended. Last season the Detroit club made an effort to have the Cleveland club take Moriarty as its manager, but Owner Somers was so well satisfied with the showing of Leo Fohl that he turned the Moriarty proposition down. There is, however, no doubt that Moriarty has ability to manage a ball club.

He is undoubtedly catch on somewhere in this capacity and will prove his worth. "Morey," as he is familiarly known, has always been a player of high intelligence. He was for years Jennings and is picked to have managerial ability.

Pittsburgh, Cornell and Colgate stand out as the undefeated eleven of the tri-state. The only one of the majority of critics will make their decisions in favor of Cornell at the end of the year remains to be seen, but the probabilities are they will, because of the schedule played by the Ithacans. Despite Pittsburgh's victories over Washington and Jefferson and the Carlisle Indians and the Navy, it has not won from Harvard, nor has it a sweeping win from Michigan. Colgate has taken games from the Army and Yale, but this is not one of the seasons when the Army and Yale are ranking at the top of the heap.

Both the Army and Navy are playing erratic football this season. The former has won from two or three strong teams but it has also failed to measure up to expectations in several of its contests. The latter has done some splendid work at times, but it also has not made good on one or two occasions when it was thought it would take the long end of the score. Perhaps the Army will be favored considerably just before the big game because of its known potential strength, but it has generally been the case that the team seemingly the stronger has failed to win, with the exception of last year. And grounds two years ago almost anything may be considered possible.

There is only one man managing Jess Willard, says Jack Cupley. "His name is Tom Jones." That sounds like a perfectly good alias. After this Jones should be held solely to blame.

Willie Ritchie is said to be taking an agricultural course at Columbia. This will fit him to raise vegetables, whereas his previous training has been in the line of raising bumps.

Mike Donovan, once well known as a minor league pitcher and also with Brooklyn and who also acted as coach for Loyola university, is now a practicing physician in Chicago, and is said to be prospering.

Jess Willard is setting a rather high figure to get him back in the ring. He is said to have demanded a purse large enough to assure him of $32,500, regardless of who his opponent may be. There may be a way to make this possible, but there are so few places where a heavy weight championship fight can be pulled off that the promoters will hesitate a long while before acceding to the champion's demands. In fact, about the only place where a big fight could be successfully conducted is down in Cuba, and it would be taking a long chance to make an exorbitant guarantee even there.

Kansas City and Buffalo are not the only weak sisters in the Federal league circuit. Both of these clubs lost heavily, and Buffalo admits that it is unable to raise any funds with which to continue the club next season. Kansas City is in about the same position, and Newark and Brooklyn both have suffered heavy losses, while the Baltimore club with a tail-end team was virtually wiped out. It will be the hardest kind of a job to get new financial assistance for this club, for the town has never proved itself capable of supporting a ball club.

Provided the Canadian league suspends for next season, which now appears likely, it is said that Ottawa will apply for a franchise in the International league. Ottawa in place of Richmond would reduce the league's mileage and the backers of the game in the Canadian city stand ready to guarantee support to a team. The fact remains, however, that Ottawa lost money in the Canadian league this year.

First Baseman Chick Autrey had a big year, in the sense that he finished with two pennant winners. After helping the Millers land the American Association pennant he joined San Francisco and wound up with a winner there.

STEPHENSON BARES LA FOLLETTE DEALS

WISCONSIN-EX-SENATOR GIVES INTIMATE ACCOUNT OF HIS POLITICAL CAREER.

GIFTS TOTAL BIG SUM

Made Donations Totalling $500,000 to Bring La Follette into National Prominence, He Writes.

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 16.—"In a remarkable volume of reminiscences, soon to be issued, former Senator Isaac Stephenson of Wisconsin gives his version of the political developments which made Senator Robert M. La Follette a national character," says Arthur Sears Henning, Washington correspondent of a Chicago newspaper.

"The volume, which came into the possession of the Tribune correspondent on Saturday, is designed to constitute a valedictory to public life by Mr. Stephenson, who retired from the senate last March at the age of 86."

"The former senator never forgave the La Follette faction for its part in trying to oust him from the senate with La Follette in Chicago during the latter part of April at the Sherman house."

La Follette was at the appointed place with Edward J. Kelly, the state bank examiner. Before Stephenson could complete what I had instructed him to say, La Follette interrupted again, making the objection that the time was his for his candidacy and that he was without funds to make the fight. Stephenson persisted, asking to be heard through before any objections were made, and outlined the plan which I had devised.

Plan Laid for Campaign.

"According to this La Follette was to announce his candidacy for the governorship. Stephenson also was to enter the field, but he withdrew at the proper time, after canvassing the northern part of the state. I knew that Henry C. Payne, the leader of the reactionary wing of the republican party, would not be a candidate, but I was reasonably sure that with the campaign I proposed we could defeat him."

"When Stephenson had mapped out the plan I handed La Follette $2,500 in currency, which I had given him for that purpose. The reluctance which La Follette had exhibited at previous meetings with Patrick and Overbeck vanished."

"Apparently overcome at the prospect, according to the detailed report of the conference made to me, and with tears running down his cheeks, Mr. La Follette declared with confidence that he would be the next governor of Wisconsin."

Machine Men Are Puzzled.

"How the plan worked out is a matter of political record. Stephenson went on with his canvass in the northern part of the state, to carry on which he gave him $2,500. La Follette carried his state, but the other parts as had been agreed upon."

"To defray the expenses of his campaign I gave him $2,500 more six weeks after the Chicago meeting. These contributions appeared to have a fixed standard. Thereafter when an outlay was needed to meet the difficulties with which the half breeds were confronted from time to time, requests were, in most cases, for this precise amount."

"These maneuvers mystified the machine politicians, who were as yet unaware of the nature of the opposition. The inner circle, which had been accustomed to decide what course the party should follow, seemed to realize that they had lost control, and did not understand how it was brought about. At the time the candidate withdrew and the others dropped out, leaving the field entirely to La Follette and Stephenson. When this came to pass Stephenson also withdrew."

"This much having been accomplished, Mr. Stephenson came to me and offered to return half the money I had given him, the unexpended balance of the contribution I had made to enable him to carry on his campaign. The rest had been used to defray his traveling expenses. In this, as in other things, I found him to be a man of absolute integrity."

"When the time for the state convention, which was held in Milwaukee, arrived, the stalwarts had capitulated, and La Follette was nominated by a unanimous vote. As his campaign manager and chairman of the state central committee he chose (Mr. Bryan, whom he regarded, he said, as a grandfather, an idealistic relationship, the value of which was to realize later when, seeking counsel and aid, he clothed me with attributes of fatherhood."

"Senator La Follette leaped to success and gained it, I should say, 'Battling Bob.' But his position was not immune from attack. To give him all forebodings an organ it was proposed to purchase 'The Milwaukee Sentinel,' and it was suggested to Senator Stephenson that he might purchase control for $146,000. He fixed $50,000 as the limit. The remainder could not be raised, and the deal fell through."

Unwed Into Senate Race.

"In 1912, Mr. Stephenson goes on to say, 'Mr. La Follette in Chicago. On that occasion, Mr. La Follette, he adds, urged me to run for the United States senate against Spooner. To particular effort, he said, would be required on my part if I supplied him with funds to carry on the campaign. He explained, 'I might go to Europe and during my absence he would bring about my election.'"

"To this the old lumberman demurred."

"The proposal I rejected out of hand, he says. 'I replied that I had no business in Europe and no intention of going there, but that I had business at home and would not consider the suggestion at all.'"

"In the meantime La Follette continued his activities. His emissaries, Mr. Stephenson writes, found their way to Marinette, some of them coming to my office stealthily by an indirect way and delivering their message with an impressive air of secrecy, although they could have walked the streets of the city at noon without attracting any more attention than did. Sometimes the emissaries departed with a package of papers, the accepted designation for one of the $2,500 contributions the advancement of the great cause so often seemed to require."

In Time Arose the Question of Election.

"The control of the state was in La Follette's hands. He had said according to Senator Stephenson's narrative that he would not go to Washington, and the possibility of electing Stephenson was discussed. La Follette said that he could not be elected."

"That insurmountable obstacle should have stood in the way of my going to the senate, Senator Stephenson writes, he said almost broke his heart."

"Eventually La Follette went to the senate himself. Senator Spooner resigned his office on March 3, 1917. On the same date Mr. Stephenson announced his candidacy for election for the remaining two years of the Spooner term. On this occasion, however, the rumors were no easier than before. Senator La Follette's aid seemed to be fruitless."

"To what extent it was exercised," says Senator Stephenson, "others may surmise. Senator La Follette himself had said that he could do no more than he had because the men generally recognized as his supporters or followers were his friends. A sudden display of feeling, I suppose, forbade any zealous attempt to influence the action or mold the conviction of the men whom he regarded as part of a duly organized political machine."

"After a prolonged scramble for the place by the half breed leaders, Mr. Stephenson was elected on May 17."

During the holiday season of 1907,

"I was in Marinette, A. H. Dahl and H. L. Ekern, two of Mr. La Follette's friends, came to see me. The purpose of their visit was to discuss money for a campaign in the interest of Senator La Follette as a presidential candidate. Both professed to be enthusiastic over the prospects of his success."

"Ekern counted upon him to carry Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota and the Dakotas, New Jersey, most of California, nearly all of the western states. I was of another mind. On Jan. 4, however, I gave them $1,000. At the same time Dahl asked me to give Ekern $2,000, saying that he was in need of money to defray the expenses of his campaign. I was under no obligation to Ekern, and did not feel called upon in any way to come to his aid, and said so."

Ask for $250,000.

"The enthusiasm of the La Follette admirers, measured by their requests for financial assistance to carry on a pre-convention campaign, was almost boundless. In January, 1908, some of them proposed that I contribute $250,000 to defray the expenses of this political venture."

"The same month Ekern came to Washington and asked me to subscribe a large sum. La Follette's nomination, he thought, would be a foregone conclusion if the money were forthcoming to make the fight. For several hours we discussed the amount sought until it reached $25,000."

"By the time Senator Stephenson prepared for an other campaign for the senate the split between himself and La Follette had been complete. In the bitter campaign that followed he expended $107,000. Success in the primaries did not assure him of election. The La Follette faction, says Stephenson, fought to the end and to the last. Investigations were set in motion, at first by the state legislature and afterward by the United States senate. Of his last fight he says:

"Here I might moralize at some length, if I were so minded, upon the rectitude of political maneuvering. The expenditure of money seems to be a relative thing, the moral turpitude depending not upon how but for what it is spent. For all of the money I devoted to the upbuilding and promotion of the half breed faction, the election of La Follette as governor, and the smashing of the old inner ring of the republican party, in direct campaign contributions and donations to candidates, and for the establishment of a newspaper to give voice to the cause, the great cause of which, I had been told, 'I was the source of leading power,' was commended in terms so flattering that I hesitate to set them down here."

GOTHAM MAYOR UNDERGOES APPENDICITIS OPERATION

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

New York, Nov. 16.—The condition of Mayor Mitchell, who was operated upon yesterday for acute appendicitis, was reported this morning as satisfactory.

HOT TEA BREAKS A COLD—TRY THIS

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea, or as the German folks call it, "Hamburger Brust Tee," at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teacup full at any time. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking a cold at once.

It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore harmless.

EX-SENATOR ISAAC STEPHENSON.

on the charge that he had expended more than $100,000 in the election and thereby violated the campaign fund law.

Tells of $500,000 Gift.

"Mr. Stephenson endeavors to even up scores by relating how he lavished $500,000 on the candidates of Mr. La Follette and his lieutenants. He says that tears of gratitude streamed down La Follette's face when the young reformer received the first $25,000."

Stephenson says he was importuned to put up $50,000 for the La Follette presidential campaign in 1908. He refused. He says he does not know whether the failure of these negotiations was reflected in the events that immediately followed, referring to the war declared on him by the La Follette following.

For almost seventy years," says Senator Stephenson in his autobiography, "I had dealt with all sorts and conditions of men."

Complains of Ingratitude.

"It remained for me in these later days to discover how quickly in the come and go, political positions can be discarded, principles abandoned, and obligations overlooked, and how readily the gauge of political progress was to the currents of political animosity and ambition."

"To sum up, I had laid the plans and given the impetus which resulted in the organization of the half breed faction, to which was due the sanely progressive legislation enacted in Wisconsin. I had contributed to the campaign funds of La Follette and many of his lieutenants, most of whom, I believe would never have held political office if left to their own resources. In the aggregate I had expended approximately $500,000. For this I have been assured without me the history of this achievement would have been a blank page. The moral of this narrative I leave for others to draw."

During his second campaign for the house of representatives which, in his own case, presented no difficulties, he contributed, he says, to carry on the struggle for control of the state legislature in the interests of Spooner $22,000.

Abandoned in Senate Race.

After his withdrawal from the house Mr. Stephenson remained in retirement for a number of years, but in 1898 and 1899, he says, Sawyer, Spooner, and others conceived the idea of having him run for the senate.

With some reluctance he consented to become a candidate. At this point, however, the republican leaders turned their backs upon him.

"The moral of the understanding," he writes, "was a valuable one for me. I discovered for the second time that political assurances were not to be taken at their face value and that I could not expect the opposition of my friends with half as much certainty as I could expect the opposition of my enemies. No sooner had the decision been reached than the organization leaders switched their support to Quarles and left me dangling in midair."

Mr. Stephenson says frankly that this was a disappointment.

"I was not indifferent, he says, to the distinction that election to the United States senate or service in that body confers—I began to realize for the first time the power and devious ways of the machine."

"This is merely a phase of motive which he avers actuated him to follow the course he did afterward. He says he was already of the mind that the machine and the railroads and other corporate interests were playing too fast and loose with the state of Wisconsin and that a shake-up would be a wholesome thing."

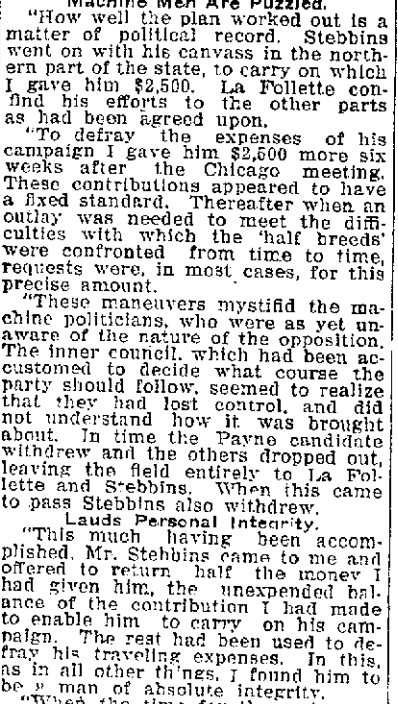

Though Edger prematurely.

"On Dec. 12, 1899, he sent me my secretary, Lewis S. Patrick, to Madison with instructions to see La Follette and to say to him that it was my suggestion that he again enter the field for the governorship the following year, 1900."

"His reply to Patrick was that his health was impaired, that he had no money to defray the expenses of a campaign, and that the time was not propitious, that it was ten years too soon for a concerted effort."

January, 1900, and again in February, Mr. Stephenson commissioned Henry Overbeck, Jr., a member of the legislature from Sturgeon Bay, to go to La Follette and convey to him a similar message. On both visits he said it was too soon, at least five years.

"I then enlisted the aid of Dr. Wayne Stebbins, a member of the state senate from Algonka, in my own district, who arranged a meeting

SENATOR ROBERT M. LA FOLLETTE.
